Halt to movies demanded in Brooklyn Heights

One councilman has had it with dodging film crews that have infiltrated the scenic streets of Brooklyn Heights.

Councilman Stephen Levin has asked the mayor's office to issue a moratorium on filming in the iconic Brooklyn neighborhood after 14 productions had cameras rolling on its brownstone-lined streets in the past two months.

Levin said Brooklyn Heights has become so bogged down with film crews shooting movies, shows and commercials that it is interfering with the daily lives of residents. There is often no break between productions and new crews move in as soon as one shoot is over. He cited an incident last Wednesday when film crews for two movies, "Delivery Man" and "Winter's Tale," were both issued permits on the same day, resulting in snarled traffic and the closure of streets and eight blocks of parking. ## Any value post-Sandy?

- After hurricane, agents report second thoughts about waterfront homes
- But many say siren call of beachfront will continue to propel value

SPENCER PLATT/GETTY IMAGES

A real estate agent who believes in waterfront value called Sandy a "bump in the road."

If the city rebuilds the waterfronts, will New York buyers come?

That is a question being mulled over by city brokers and builders after Sandy slid houses from foundations and sent floodwaters rushing into waterfront property around the boroughs.

Many New Yorkers are still unable to sleep in their homes, with a slew destroyed in the storm and hundreds more damaged and slated for bulldozing by the city.

Waterfront recovery will also be the topic at a Municipal Art Society event next week, where Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Shaun Donovan, assigned by President Barack Obama to oversee recovery here, will speak.

One thing real estate experts agree on is that flooding will add to the list of concerns investigated by New York browsers, alongside bedbugs, views and square footage.

Doug Perlson, CEO and founder of RealDirect, said two separate buyers recently looking in the Financial District added a new specification: no apartments in Zone A, which was evacuated. One specifically sent a map of the evacuation zone, he said.

"I think that's the knee-jerk reaction," he said.

The keynote speaker will be Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Shaun Donovan, assigned by President Barack Obama to oversee recovery here.

Gary Malin, president of Citi Habitats, said the pull of the water would never be trumped by safety concerns.

"The views are something people crave," he said. "It's in unlimited supply, and very serene, and people love that."

Harold Kobner, associate broker at Argo Residential real estate, agreed, "This was a bump in the road."

Street artist busted by NYPD for 'drone' posters

A street artist named Essam Attia is in hot water with the NYPD — hot water that he foresaw in an article that some say might have led to his arrest.

Attia, 29, allegedly replaced posters in 56 pay-phone displays with fake "ads" using the NYPD's official seal and reading "Drones: Protection When You Least Expect It."

He now faces 56 counts of criminal possession of a forged instrument in the third degree.

According to the complaint, Attia is also being charged with grand larceny in the fourth degree, likely because the value of the stolen property exceeded $1,000, as well as possession of a firearm that was found between his bed frame and mattress when police searched his apartment.

The NYPD confirmed that he was arrested Wednesday, and the District Attorney's Office reported that he was arraigned at 12:30 a.m. Thursday. Bail was set at $2,500 cash or $10,000 bond.

Unconfirmed reports indicated that two friends bailed him out and that the firearm charge was dropped. He is due in court again today.

Back in September, Attia

Some in the art community have suggested the article may have helped police identify Attia.

The article included a video interview with Attia's face and voice obscured, in which he asserts that his goal is to spark conversation.

"We have to remember that these are devices that right now are being used internationally to kill people," Attia said in the video.

The DA's Office and the NYPD declined to comment on whether the article helped lead them to Attia, though a source at the NYPD did indicate knowledge of the video included in the article when responding to inquiries about "NYPD drone strike zone" street signs around Brooklyn, for which the artist takes partial credit in the video.

Apple's Cue seeks overhaul of maps amid duel with Google

Apple Inc.'s Eddy Cue, who took charge of map software last month, is racing to turn around the troubled service, firing a senior manager and urging partners to improve data amid an escalating rivalry with Google Inc.

Cue, 48, senior vice president overseeing Apple's online services, pushed out maps supervisor Richard Williamson in a management shakeup soon after taking over the program, said people familiar with the situation, who asked not to be named because the information isn't public. Cue is seeking advice from outside map-technology experts and prodding maps provider TomTom NV to fix landmark and navigation data it shares with Apple.

HONG KONG. Investors reacting to the Hong Kong government's campaign to curb home buying in the world's most expensive market are shifting money into parking spaces, pushing up prices that in high-end neighborhoods can match the cost of two U.S. homes.

The average price of a previously owned parking spot in residential complexes rose 6.7 percent to HK$640,000 ($82,600) in the third quarter, the second highest on record, from the prior three months,

Suicide bombers attack US base in Afghanistan

GETTY IMAGES

► Some Afghans doubt government security forces will be able to defend against any Taliban attempts to seize power again after foreign troops withdraw.

Suicide attackers detonated bombs and fired rockets outside a major U.S. base in Afghanistan yesterday, killing five people in a brazen operation that highlighted the country's security challenges ahead of the 2014 NATO combat troop pullout.

Local police officials said bodies in Afghan police and military uniforms were scattered around the entrance of the airfield in the eastern city of Jalalabad after a two-hour battle. A Taliban spokesman said the militant group had launched the 6 a.m. assault.

The Taliban, who have been fighting U.S.-led NATO and Afghan forces for more than a decade, sometimes dress in uniforms for attacks.

Taliban text

► In a text message, Taliban spokesman Zabihullah Mujahid said: "This morning at 6 a.m. a number of our devotees attacked the major U.S. Base in Jalalabad city and so far have brought heavy casualties to the enemy."

Two suicide bombers died after blowing themselves up in cars, said Nasir Ahmad Safi, a spokesman for the provincial government.

Seven other bombers were killed in the a gun battle with Afghan and coalition forces. Three Afghan soldiers and two civilians also died, said Safi.

U.S. helicopters circled overhead.

Several coalition troops were wounded, said Major Martyn Crighton, a spokesman for the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force.

The United States and Afghan government are scrambling to stabilize Afghanistan before most NATO combat troops withdraw at the end of 2014 and hand over security to Afghan forces.

President Hamid Karzai's government say Afghan security forces have made good progress.

Afghanistan's defense ministry spokesman said there were rocket attacks at the Jalalabad base followed by suicide bombings. REUTERS

According to the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons (AAOS), there are about 270,000 knee replacement operations performed each year in the United States. This image depicts the procedure.

Want to avoid knee surgery?

Our program could be the solution you are looking for.

Do your knees hurt when going up or down the stairs?

Do you frequently take medication for knee pain?

Have you tried physical therapy?

Do the activities you enjoy cause pain in your knees?

Have you had cortisone or other injections to the knee that have not worked?

Do your knees make you feel older than you really are?

Are you afraid that your knee pain is only going to get worse?

If you answered YES to any of these questions, keep reading...

Why do knee injections often fail? What's different about our procedure?

Most doctors today do one of three things:

- 1) They perform "blind injections" (an injection done without imaging guidance).
- 2) They use antiquated equipment from as far back as 2001, even in some of the largest hospitals in New York. 3) They use Cortisone, which can have side effects.

Precision is the difference.

FACT: 30-40% of blind injections result in needle misplacement. <sup>[1]</sup>With this much inaccuracy, it's no wonder most people never find relief.

Our solution...
Our office uses Hyalgan®

What exactly is injected into the knee?

Hyaluronic acid (Hyalgan®) is a natural substance extracted from rooster combs and purified to mimic the lubricating substances that occur naturally in the joint, called synovial fluid. In patients with osteoarthritis, synovial fluid "dries up", allowing the cartilage of the joint to rub against itself and other surfaces. This causes pain, inflammation, and usually damage to the joint. Think of this treatment like oiling a rigid, squeaky door hinge.

When will I feel results?

Most feel an immediate reduction in pain and can return to normal activities in weeks.

Will my insurance cover this treatment?

TRUE STORY OF DARKNESS

Darkness is an illusion produced by the mind. Your eyes detect a sliver of light shining in the surrounding world, like Alice viewing Wonderland through a keyhole. Radio- and microwaves are light with an invisible frequency, just as many sounds resonate too high or low for human ears to detect. If you could see all light, darkness would disappear.

Let's say you can see the whole spectrum. Radio towers become visible like beacons outside normally dark rooms, streaming through solid walls like glass. Cell phones flash through buildings everywhere there are people, beaming and catching conversations encoded in light.

The Milky Way becomes a thin inferno streaking across the sky day and night, each spark a star. Oceans of gas and dust in space absorb most visible light streaming from the galaxy's core, like overcast skies hiding the sun. Radio waves pass through intergalactic dust, revealing light from more than a hundred billion stars in a dense strip along the galaxy disk.

14 billion years ago, which provided all matter for the universe as we know it. Whether the bang erupted from a tiny point, higher dimensions colliding or something else, you are made of that energy. So in a way you were present at the Big Bang.

The best evidence for something banging is heat leftover in microwaves everywhere in the vacuum of space. Evidence for the theory was discovered accidentally.

In 1964 two New Jersey scientists couldn't identify the source of static in their radio telescope. They even evicted pigeons and scraped droppings from the dish, while the pesky signal was from the birth of the universe itself. If you could see microwaves, the night sky would glow in every direction from the Big Bang, like embers from a fire.

Darkness doesn't really exist, even in the widest gaps between galaxies. After all, eyes only detect light while you see with your mind. # Considering grad school? Consider this

Pay a visit: Visit the school you are applying to and connect with faculty and prospective supervisors.

Having that face time with a member of the selection committee or a prospective supervisor can go a long way in helping you to get into a program. Many programs will not admit a student unless they already have a faculty member who is willing to supervise his or her research.

If you take the time to learn who is out there and connect with him or her about your area of interest, then you are halfway, at least, to getting in.

App don'ts

▶ Don't hand in an application that is disorganized or one that contains spelling or grammatical mistakes. This will give the impression that you're not clear about your purpose or do not take the application seriously.

▶ Scale back the flattery. A number of admissions committee chairs have cited distaste for applications that include insincere flattery, such as praising the program in an obsequious manner.

Do your research on research: Take time before you start the application process to reflect on what you would like to research while in grad school.

The most successful applicants are those who have a clear research interest — one that is innovative or takes a new approach to an old question. You need to know how you want to conduct your research, what resources you intend to use, what burning question you want to address and why it's important. Of course, it is difficult at this point in time to know the answers to all of this — but the closer you can get, the better.

Have a mission statement: Prepare a statement of purpose that is personal, not clichéd or filled with broad, sweeping statements and random flattery of the program to which you are applying.

Start collecting recommendation letters ASAP

Give the people writing your letters of recommendation at least four weeks' notice. You want them to be thinking of you positively when they write that letter — so the more leisurely and the more prepared they are, the better the letter will be. If they are rushed, they may feel frustrated or stressed — and that will have a negative impact. Also, make sure you're on good terms with that professor: Often, students receive unflattering letters because they fail to ask whether the potential recommendation author would write a favorable letter.

Bullying hits unsuspected classrooms

In 2007, Jaime Lester launched a study on workplace bullying at George Mason University. While there have been thousands of similar organizational studies over the years, this may have been the first to look specifically at the faculty of a university.

"Our end results were very confusing. If we had X percent of faculty bullied by other faculty, is that high compared to other colleges? We didn't know, because there is so little that's known about this," says

35%
A recent study by CareerBuilder found that up to 35 percent of employees have been bullied in the workplace.

Lester. "So I felt we needed a conversation starter. How can we frame this in such a way that we push forward more work on this topic?"

The result, "Workplace Bullying in Higher Education," will be released in December. The book features contributions from more than a dozen bullying experts, including two of the nation's leading workplace aggression scholars: Joel H. Neuman of SUNY New Paltz and Wayne State's Loreleigh Keashly.

But a college faculty is like no other set of co-workers, and this book makes an effort to walk through the practical and legal particularities of a college campus. While most colleges have created strong anti-bullying resources for students, the only recourse for faculty and staff is frequently to notify their human resources departments.

"Power dynamics are very different in higher education. If you look at the literature on organizations, generally, they say women are more likely to be bullied than men, and people in lower levels are more likely to be bullied than in higher levels," explains Lester. "But in higher education I think it's ▶ Bullying isn't just a middle school — or student — problem.

much more complicated. We have some evidence of students bullying faculty, staff bullying faculty and the other way around. It's a flatter power dynamic. That changes who is bullied and how often."

A four-year degree isn't always the right answer

Quoted

"Your parents, your family, your school: Everybody tells you to go to a four-year school and get that degree. But it's not for everyone." HUTCHINS

► New book provides career guidance for those who aren't interested in pursuing a traditional degree

After publishing how-to books on paying for college, the American Library Association felt it was about time to create a guide for students looking to forgo what has become an American right of passage.

"I Don't Want to Go to College: Other Paths to Success" is a manual for those who know a four-year degree isn't right for them. In 200 pages, the book takes the reader step-by-step through the process of pursuing a rewarding career, beginning with skills and interests worksheets to help illuminate alternatives.

"Your parents, your family, your school: Everybody tells you to go to a four-year school and get that degree. But it's not for everyone," says the guidebook's author, Heather Z. Hutchins. "If your inclination doesn't run that way, then there's lots of other opportunities for you. When I started researching the book, I was really shocked at just how many alternatives there are to a four-year degree."

"Other Paths" profiles a wide range of careers, from pharmacy technician to hair-stylist, and includes information about the specific training and certificates required for each of them.

"I tried to be really meticulous about including every important detail on these jobs, so the reader can know in advance exactly what they want, and how to get it," says Hutchins. "I wanted to give people a resource on just about every aspect of the job search: how to give a good interview, prepare a professional resume, find an apprenticeship and ... apply for financial aid. There's plenty of learning going on outside of college campuses."

Oh, the beauty of dating around the holidays. You go from being asked why you don't have a boyfriend/girlfriend to, when you do finally have someone you could fathom bringing home, stressing out about introducing your current sex buddy to your parents without resorting to pharmaceuticals.

So you don't overdose on Xanax, we brought in a professional: "Millionaire Matchmaker" Patti Stanger, who we caught up with at a tasting of TY KU in New York City.

"First of all, the person who comes should bring a gift to the parents," Stanger instructs. "That sets the tone. Find out what [your partner's parents] like. Wine? Chocolate? The second thing is telling your parents a little bit about the person's interests and likes, so they have a hot button to push," she notes. "Tell the same thing to your mate, so they can get into a conversation. Once that's broken in, they'll be fine."

Feeling better? Good. Now onto the next dilemma: What should you give as a gift? If you're on a budget, don't look to Stanger for guidance — they call her the "Millionaire

Paging Gloria Steinem?

Stanger is getting nervous about the reversal of modern gender roles. "I wonder why men are getting more passive and we're getting stronger," she ponders about the current state of the sexes. "There are more [women] in college, we're making more money and now men are getting wimpy. Soon they're going to morph into girls. And then there will be nobody [else] but our vibrators. Seriously."

'I will never go back to Marineland'

► That's the solemn vow of Marion Cotillard after portraying a whale trainer in new film 'Rust and Bone'

In "Rust and Bone," Marion Cotillard turns in a moving performance as a killer-whale trainer at Marineland — a Sea World-type amusement park in the south of France — who loses her legs after an on-the-job accident. But playing a double-amputee wasn't nearly as difficult for the Oscar-winning actress as visiting the real-life Marineland. "I don't feel comfortable in a place like that," she admits.

"On my first day I arrived five minutes before the show. I watched it and I thought it was

"On my first day I arrived five minutes before the show. I watched it and I thought it was horrifying."

COTILLARD, ON MARINELAND

horrifying," she remembers. "And then my trainer turned to me after the show and said, 'Did you like it?' And I thought, 'how am I going to answer? Am I going to lie? Am I going to tell the truth? And I couldn't lie. I said, 'No, I hated it, but I don't want you to think I'm disrespectful.'"

That didn't mean she couldn't connect with her character and feel at home in her wet suit, though. "Those people, they have a passion. They're passionate about what they do. They love the animals, so they made my job easy because passion is contagious," she says. "But I will never go back to Marineland."

A lot of Cotillard's discomfort with the establishment reminds her of another film, "Finding Nemo," and the unintended consequences of its popularity. "There was an explosion of sales of clown fish after that movie," she says. "The story of the movie is telling the audience don't take them out to put them in an aquarium, and that's exactly what happened. ... I really wonder if those Sea World, Marineland places really make a difference."

'Twilight' tops 'Skyfall' again

Box office

The "Twilight" teen vampire movie shined again at U.S. and Canadian box offices, earning $17.4 million and its third consecutive No. 1 ranking as James Bond held strong and Brad Pitt's new movie struggled.

"Twilight" finale "Breaking Dawn - Part 2" finished just ahead of "Skyfall," the 23rd film in the Bond franchise. "Skyfall" rang up $17 million from Friday through Sunday.

"Breaking Dawn - Part 2" has pulled in $254.6 million since its release, while "Skyfall" has grossed $246 million, putting both among the top films of the year.

Brad Pitt's new movie, the small-budget gangster film "Killing Them Softly," grossed $7 million and landed in seventh place. REUTERS

Let your next job find you

► Employers are hitting the Web in search of top talent ► How to stand out using social media profiles, a bit of branding and some strategic marketing

It wasn't long ago that job searching meant circling interesting opportunities in the Sunday newspaper or dropping off a résumé by hand to a receptionist.

Now, with social networking evolving so rapidly, even traditional online job boards are struggling to keep up with the fast-changing way employees are getting hired. Candidates are no longer the only ones actively searching for jobs — employers are now hunting on the Internet to find top talent, as well.

So how exactly do you get on their radar? Well, the answer is relatively simple: It's all about personal branding and online footprinting.

Think of yourself as a brand and define your niche. Rather than focusing on what you want to

Be searchable by trade

Do your homework in your industry and know what all the keywords that surround your dream job are. Once you have determined which industry specific keywords are used, scatter them around all of your profiles. Don't change your title to something meaningless like Digital and Social Media Marketing Web 2.0 Internet Networker and Consultant, but do use keywords to improve your chances of showing up in search results.

do, focus on what you already do or have done that is relevant to your "dream job." Defining what you do will help employers determine whether or not you have the skills they are looking for. Also, remember to be clear and concise with your personal brand messaging; it should be apparent at first glance what it is that you do.

Treat yourself like a marketing campaign. This doesn't mean putting banner ads all over the Web to promote yourself, but you should be using social networking sites such as Facebook, Twitter and LinkedIn to showcase your professional skills. Think about where your "target industry" hangs out and make sure you are present there as well.

LinkedIn, Twitter and even Facebook are gold mines when it comes to attracting attention from companies.

Complete your profiles and keep them consistent. Without overloading your profiles with details of everything you have ever done, profiles should give more information than just the bare minimum.

Complete profiles will not only give employers more insight into your skill set than just a name or title, but they will also help you show up more frequently in search results. Consistencies between profiles will also help employers find you.

How to handle your haters

At some point in our lives, we all have to deal with haters. Maybe someone is rude to you on the subway. Maybe you've got a negative person in your office. Or perhaps you receive negative messages on the Internet. Experiencing negativity from others can be a real drag, and it's very hard not to take this stuff personally. I often witness people get so caught up in the negativity of others that they get physically ill over it. Letting haters get you down is a huge waste of time and energy. To help you navigate these relationships, I've outlined three steps for handling the downers in your life.

Zen in the City

Step 1: Understand that it's not about you

When people attack us, it's easy to assume that the attack has merit and means there's something wrong with us. I choose to have a different perspective — I like to have compassion for these folks. Let's face it: A happy person won't waste time being mean to others. Therefore, we must have a tremendous amount of compassion for these people. Anyone who wastes time and energy spreading negativity clearly needs more light in his or her life. Begin by simply reminding yourself that a happy person doesn't harm others. Let this realization help you have compassion for the haters.

Step 2: Drop the boxing gloves

Through my spiritual practice, I've come to understand that "insistence means investment." When we invest in the illusions of others by defending ourselves or fighting back, we only invest deeper into the craziness. Engaging in negativity creates more of it. Therefore, instead of fighting back or becoming defensive choose to release defensiveness and steer far away from creating more drama. Fighting back is like yelling at a barking dog. There's no good outcome. Instead, practice defenselessness and witness how much energy and time you save avoiding more drama.

► No need for a fight: Avoid the drama and notice how much time and energy you save. Want to learn more from Gabrielle? Tonight begins her free course on how to create what you want. Details are here: www.gabbyb.tv/free-december-group-coaching.

Step 3: Forgive

Forgiveness helps us detach from the negative energy cord that ties us to our enemies. Energy is in everything. If we don't clean up our energy through forgiveness, we'll continue to carry negativity. In the case of handling these negative folks, it's imperative that you practice the F-word: Forgive. Steps one and two will prime you for forgiveness. Compassion will reconnect you to a sense of oneness and defenselessness, which will help you put down the boxing gloves and settle into a new perspective. The final step is to let go fully and forgive. In this step, you'll set the intention. Simply say, "I wish to forgive you and release you." Then let the forgiveness process take on a life of its own.

It's racism to accuse Jews of racism

RE: "HARMONY STARTS WITHIN THE FAMILY" (METRO, NOV. 30-DEC. 2) As a Jew of European background who was active for many years in the campaign to rescue Ethiopian Jews, I was appalled that Metro recently published a letter by Paul Hunter that was nothing but an ignorant, slanderous rant against what Hunter calls "European Jews."

Racism against European Jews is also racism, and if Hunter is really sincere about eradicating bigotry from the world, he should start with the ugly anti-Semitism that poisons his own soul.

I would also recommend that Metro readers touring Israel ask to visit Ethiopian Jewish communities so that they can see for themselves the miracle of rebirth in the Holy Land.

If the shoe fits, buy a lot more of them

RE: "PHOTO OF COP GIVING SHOES TO HOMELESS MAN GOES VIRAL" (METRO, NOV. 30-DEC. 2) The photo of the police officer kneeling and giving a pair of shoes to a homeless man in New York City just brought tears to my eyes.

Now this is what Christmas should be all about. Christmas is not about fighting in malls for meaningless gifts, it's not about drinking your head off, it's not about killing trees to hang decorations on them — but peace on Earth and good will.

Anti-Islam video just a cover-up for gov't conspiracy

RE: "IT ONLY TAKES A FEW BAD APPLES" (METRO, NOV. 28) Letter writer John Francis Fox is either gullible or hasn't heard the news.

The anti-Islam movie had nothing to do with Islamist revolting and killing four Americans. If you ever gone to YouTube and typed anti-Islam, you would see hundreds of videos more offensive than this guy's movie.

The U.S. government used the movie as a cover-up. They were well aware that terrorist groups were going to attack U.S. embassies in the Middle East, and they didn't do anything about it.

If anything, John, you should be angry at the U.S. government for using this movie as an excuse to portray Muslims as savage people incapable of rational thought, because that is what world thought when they heard the news.

RE: "JESSICA SIMPSON RAISES NICK LACHEY'S BABY COUNT BY ONE" (METRO, NOV. 29) I read your article and found to be extremely catty and mean. Calling Jessica Simpson gigantic was very mean. Someone in your position should be more careful with the words you use.

It's cruel, and I'm almost certain if you were to see her in person you wouldn't fix your mouth to say to her face what you wrote in that article. Shame on you.

Horoscope

♊ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. With the tremendous optimism you espouse, you should have little trouble awakening enthusiasm in others. Whatever it is you're doing, they'll want to be part of it.

♊ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Although you may not think you require any assistance from others, they might end up helping you get what you want. You'll realize how badly you needed help.

♊ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Most any group could benefit from your presence. You'll be a great catalyst, knowing exactly what needs doing and how to effectively go about doing it.

♊ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. A special target that you've been striving for could turn out to be much bigger than you initially thought. Once achieved, it will have many far-reaching effects.

♊ Aries March 21-April 19. A friend who has been quite fortunate for you once before might be so for you again. Stick close to him or her, because this person is likely to be quite helpful.

♊ Taurus April 20-May 20. This could be one of those wonderful days when everything you touch generates additional income. Pay special attention to a side endeavor. ♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Lady Luck is likely to be involved in many of your endeavors, but she will probably shine most on a partnership arrangement.

♊ Cancer June 21-July 22. Focus your efforts on making as much money as you can. If you do, it's likely that you will find a way to increase your earnings through a one-time source.

♊ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Working in close tandem with others will prove to be quite lucky for you. However, the results will be even more impressive if you call the shots instead of letting another do so.

♊ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. This can be an especially rewarding day, mostly because you'll be able to successfully weld your inner desires to your external capabilities. Something great will come of it.

♊ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Something extraordinary could occur, which would put you in an extremely happy frame of mind. Whatever it is, it will be the type of event that will be worth celebrating.

♊ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Instead of diminishing or modifying your hopes and expectations, try to elevate them to new heights. You are far luckier than you may realize, so think big. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Tebow rests up for Jags

Jets backup quarterback Tim Tebow was inactive for a game for the first time this season, the result of an injury to his ribs he suffered three weeks ago in Seattle.

Tebow was rarely used in practice throughout the week and barely threw the ball. On Friday, he said it was painful to even attempt passes.

"I never thought he was full-go. Kind of sitting back, a little trouble throwing the football. We did practice him on a very limited basis throughout the week," head coach Rex Ryan said. "Just something that I felt it'd be better for him to take this week off and should be much more healthy for Jacksonville."

NEXT MAN UP

► Sanchez benched as Ryan finally gives in to QB controversy ► McElroy leads team to win, albeit ugly, in relief ► Decision on next week unknown

The nightmare continues for quarterback Mark Sanchez, who had one of the worst outings of his professional career in the Jets' 7-6 win over the Cardinals.

Sanchez was yanked from the game in the third quarter in favor of backup quarterback Greg McElroy, who was elevated to the active roster in place of the injured Tim Tebow. It was McElroy's first appearance in an NFL game.

"Obviously it wasn't my day," Sanchez said. "I didn't expect it. Doesn't matter, it's the coach's call. He wants to win the game, so he's going to do his best to do that."

The Jets defense was there to bail out the sputtering offense throughout the game, limiting the Cardinals to just three points in the first half and just five first downs for the whole game, tied for the Cardinals' lowest total in franchise history.

With 4:48 left in the third quarter, the Jets inserted McElroy into the game as the crowd rose to its feet to cheer.

In just over a quarter of work, McElroy was an efficient 5-of-7 for 29 yards with a 1-yard touchdown pass to tight end Jeff Cumberland early in the fourth quarter. It was enough for the Jets to win by the narrowest of margins as his teammates seemed to feed off the emotion of the crowd.

"It was tough to gauge the energy. I didn't have a decibel meter where I could tell what the crowd's noise was," McElroy said. "I was excited to get a shot to go in there."

There could have been more glory for McElroy, but the Jets' final drive of the game ended on the Cardinals' 1-yard line as they chose to run out the clock rather than get another touchdown.

"I really liked the way he controlled that clock. It's no surprise, he comes from a great program," head coach Rex

Ryan said. "He was smart; he knew how to handle that clock. He did a tremendous job of it; he's smart."

After the game, there was no decision on who would get the nod next Sunday against the Jaguars. Ryan said that any possible change would be coming later this week, which could allow Tebow the chance to start in his hometown.

► Carmelo Anthony had 34 points — the fifth time he has scored more than 30 this season.

Knicks now handling easy games

► Veteran squad learning to win games they should ► New York goes up in Atlantic ► Wallace gets tossed

The Knicks have been able to rectify two problems this year — they are beating teams they should be beating and winning matinee home games.

They did both yesterday as they disposed of the also-ran Suns, 106-99.

The Knicks were able to overcome the noon start and jump on the Suns early en route to a 59-42 halftime lead. Phoenix battled back, as almost all teams do, cutting the deficit to as little as four in the waning moments of the fourth quarter, but the Knicks' veteran leadership and key buckets by Anthony, Raymond Felton and Steve Novak were too much for the overmatched Suns.

Felton notched 23 points, on 10-of-17 shooting, including 3-of-6 from 3-point range. He also added seven assists but was more disappointed in allowing the Suns back into the game.

"We should've finished it early in the fourth quarter, but they kept fighting and making shots," Felton said. "But we were able to hold them off. ... Good teams do that."

Whereas in the past the

Sheed don't lie

Rasheed Wallace lasted all of 85 seconds in yesterday's game before earning two technical fouls and an ejection. The first he received for a hard foul, before being tossed for shouting "ball don't lie" after the free throw.

► "He's the only guy in the league who gets a tech for saying 'ball don't lie,'" Carmelo Anthony said.

Knicks often lost either their focus or competitive fire against one of the league's bottom feeders, their maturity this season has allowed them to do what good teams do — beat up on the undermanned.

New York is now up in the Atlantic Division by a full game over their new cross-river rival Nets, as they improved to 6-0 at home.

Real Estate/Sale

PUBLISHERS NOTE

All real estate advertising herein is subject to the Federal Fair Housing Act of 1968 and state and local fair housing laws. The Fair Housing Act makes it illegal to advertise any preference, limitation or discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, handicap, familial status, or national origin or an intention to make any such preference, limitation or discrimination. State or local laws may make unlawful advertising that discriminates on the basis of age, marital status, or sexual orientation. Metro US will not knowingly accept any advertising for real estate which violates the law. The law requires that all dwellings advertised are available on an equal opportunity basis. If you have any questions regarding housing discrimination, call the Long Island Housing Services at (800) 660-6920 in Long Island or the Anti-Discrimination Center at (212) 346-7600 in New York City. To file a complaint call HUD toll-free at (800) 669-9777 or the New York City Commission on Human Rights at (212) 306-7500
